

Living in a major metropolitan city, I have to put up with daily traffic challenges. When XM Satellite Radio came out with localized reports for both traffic and weather, I was delighted. They really hit the mark... their reports are timely, accurate and more specific than any locale forecasts. What can be wrong with this? They are meeting a demand for better, more timely and accurate traffic reports. And they should continue to be able to maintain the "new standard" for customer satisfaction! Please don't let the special interest groups influence this great service to us XM listeners.
